Comments

The pome grape has all the prerequisites for an excellent dessert wine. The fully ripe grapes are subjected to a five-month drying process. This reduces the grape weight to less than half, while at the same time concentrating the ingredients so that a sugar concentration of around 38% is achieved during pressing. After slow, gentle fermentation in stainless steel tanks, the young wine is filled into barriques, stored there for five months and then filled into 0.375 litre bottles.

Pairing

As a dessert wine, can also be enjoyed with flavoursome cheese
